The DG 202 is at last finished cost £120 estimated. weight 4 kg . wing span 4.25. Just need the right weather to Maiden. After I get back from occupied Palestine I will hopefully start the 1/3 DG 808 build.

Hi Terry I think it will be the ash 31 and the DG 202 hopefully if the Maidens go well. I think I will be pushing it to get the DG 800 finished in time you may have to wait for next year 😞 . but it could be done for September if lucky . ROO 😊

Hi Roo ,

Your work with glass is impressive the canopy frame looks very crisp,

Being totally honest I'm completely in the dark using glass and making moulds but it doesn't stop me watching and wanting to learn more.

I have a large (1/3 scale) dg600 fuz which I hope will be this years winter project so I have lots to learn.

Hope you get everything done before your deadline.

After the Christmas holiday I have fitted the servo's and and canopy. I would like to get this glider finished before I fly out to Palestine at the end of the month.

Not made much progress with the DG to much messing with other gliders and starting carving a ash 31 fuz . But I have now made the flapping bits. Next job is the wing joiners.

Oh no it shouldn't..... 😊

That's a DG 200 it has Two piece canopy, the DG 202 has a single piece canopy hinged at the front. The 202 had a wider cockpit by 38mm and instrument cluster was moved nearer to the pilot by about the same amount, with wheel brake lever of the 100/200 removed and replaced with a trimmer trigger similar to the Libelle and Kestrel, and the wheel brake actuation moved to the end of the airbrake travel.....

I'll go take off my anorak now, it's getting hot in it 😊
